Chirurgia (Bucur). 2018;113(5):712-718
http://dx.doi.org/10.21614/chirurgia.113.5.712

Breast Metastasis as a Presentation of Malignant Melanoma

Amira Asaad[1], Abdalla Saad Abdalla Al-Zawi[1], Philip Idaewor[1], Buddhika Jayasooryia[1], Victoria Yates[1], Soad Eldruki[2], Jessica English[1]
[1]Basildon & Thurrock University Hospital, Essex, England
[2]Department of Pathomorphology, Benghazi Medical Centre, Libya

Abstract
The majority of malignant breast lesions are primary tumors originated from breast tissue. These primary breast cancers usually metastasize to lymph nodes, lungs, bones and brain. Metastases from cancers of other organs to the breast are very rare, but have been encountered in patients with malignant melanoma, carcinoid tumors or lung carcinoma. The present paper reports a case of mammary metastasis from malignant melanoma.
Key words: breast cancer, malignant melanoma, melanoma antigen